

How to earn money through freelance translation and find freelance projects

A person or machine that translates books, articles, etc. from one language into another

A person who translates speech called interpreter.

In general there are many languages which differ to place to place. Even in the part of uncivilized areas peoples using body language or making movements of limbs their conveying the messages. Likewise machine languages are also there. So it is not possible that every human being should know all the languages. As per latest science it is researched that all the living creatures have their own languages to convey the messages to one another by making sounds. Of course it is their language. Hence the question of translators arises here.

The main job of a translator is to convert one language to other.

The work of a freelance translator

First thing a translator must understand the potential of customers and what they are looking for. Translator must understand the expectation of customers from you.

Where to find freelance projects

There are a stunning number of online resources that connect translators and their clients. Some allow you to add your profile to their database for free, so if a client searches the site for a translator they can access your qualifications, rates, and contact information. You can also search the job board and even apply for projects without being a paying member.

The way most of the job sites work is by bidding. The individual or company with the job will post it on the job board, and translators can make direct contact to provide a price quote and describe their qualifications. The individual or company then selects the candidate who best matches their criteria.
